Who we are

Built Digital SA connects people, businesses and ideas across South Australia's digital built environment, creating a forum for collaboration around how we design, deliver and operate the infrastructure our State needs to grow.

South Australia is entering a significant period of investment across defence and AUKUS, housing, health, transport, energy and advanced manufacturing. At the same time, our industry is being asked to deliver more, faster and with greater certainty, while navigating challenges around productivity, skills, cost and complexity.

Built Digital SA brings industry, government and academia together to explore how digital engineering, BIM, information management, data, AI, automation, digital twins and emerging technologies can help address these challenges.

Our focus extends beyond project delivery. We look at how digital capability can improve the entire lifecycle of built assets — from planning and design through construction, operation and renewal — helping reduce rework, improve decision-making, strengthen collaboration and create better-performing infrastructure.

For South Australia, this is especially important. Growth in defence, housing, health infrastructure, transport, energy and major precinct development will require new ways of working across traditionally fragmented organisations and supply chains. Digital capability can help strengthen local skills, improve productivity and create a more connected and resilient construction industry.

We bring together designers, contractors, engineers, asset owners, technology providers, consultants, government, researchers and educators to share knowledge, challenge existing approaches and connect global thinking with local opportunity.

Our ambition is to help redefine how South Australia grows — not simply by building more, but by building smarter.

Through regular events and industry discussions, Built Digital SA provides an accessible, business-focused environment for people to build capability, develop relationships and understand the technologies, processes and policies shaping the future of our sector.
